A Lifesaving At-Home Checkup

More importance is attached to physical fitness nowadays. However, staying fit can be expensive when going to professional agencies for medical checkups. Here we show you three ways to do medical checkup at home, try them for a rough idea about your health condition.

1. Balance On One Leg

Hold for up to 60 seconds. If you fall down early, you may be at higher risk for brain decline. In a Japanese study, 30 percent of older adults who could balance for only 20 seconds or fewer had microbleeds in the brain, an early sign of risk for stroke or dementia(痴呆). These microbleeds can affect balance, memory, and decision making.

2. Touch Your Toes

Sit with your back straight, then lean forward and try to touch your toes. Not even close? You might be at risk for heart problems. By using this test, University of North Texas researchers found that some old inflexible folks have to have the heart work harder to provide enough blood, raising the risk of heart attack or stroke.

3. Sitting To Standing

Time how long it takes to lift and lower yourself from a chair ten times as fast as you can. Senior adults who did ten repetitions in 21 seconds or fewer were less likely to die over the next 13 years than those who took longer. The test requires muscle strength, balance, and heart fitness; being slow could mean underlying disease before symptoms arise.

The above are home tests everyone could do to keep you fit and they don't require much time or money. Learn what possible dangers are hiding inside you and how to deal with them.

56. What may go wrong if you balance on one leg for only 20 seconds or fewer?

A. Heart. B. Brain. C. Leg. D. Muscle.

57. A person's muscle strength can be tested by ____.

A. sitting with the back straight B. balancing on one leg

C. touching the toes D. sitting to standing

58. The three ways to do medical checkup mentioned in the passage are ____.

A. money-saving B. long-lasting C. energy-demanding D. resources-wasting

My Experience in Ghana

I decided to take part in an exchange program in Ghana. The 30 of us participating in the program met up the first morning in Ghana to meet Fred, our guide in Ghana.

We boarded the bus to Senase, a village of 3,000 in Northwest Ghana. Once we got to the village, we were greeted by the queen mother and the other elders. A young girl performed a dance for us with Ghanaian drums, and then the elders each thanked us for coming to the village and helping their children and their schools.

After our meeting ended, we split up into three groups and went to different schools, spending most of the day handing out toothbrushes and school supplies, meeting with the children, and playing games with various classes. It was really interesting to see the schools and to see what all of the different classes were learning.

We got back to our host's house that night literally seconds before the skies opened up over Senase, and since the power was out, Fred, Cari (my roommate) and I sat out under the roof listening to the pouring rain and talking about our lives. We were able to hear Fred's story, which was absolutely incredible. I can say it gave me a new sense of respect for the Ghanaian people, their unity in the face of tremendous hardship, and the immense amount of care and love they hold in their hearts, not only for their families but their entire community.

The next day we performed our dance for one of the schools, to the delight (and laughter) of the children, queen mother, and principal. After that we were on the bus heading back.

During the bus ride, new thoughts and questions filled my mind. Where is this fire Senase lit in my heart going to take me, and how can I feed it and build it into real change? How do I bring this back to my community, and then back home to my family and friends? These were only a few of the questions that I was struggling with and continue to struggle with, and I can't say I have found any answers yet. All I know is that Senase did light a fire within me, and I refuse to ever let it burn out.

59. How did Senase villagers feel about the author's visit?

A. Curious. B. Surprised. C. Grateful. D. Nervous.

60. The purpose of the exchange is to _____.

A. give grand performances B. help local schools and children

C. have great fun and enjoy sceneries D. better understand Ghanaian customs

61. What impressed the author deeply in Fred's story?

A. Ghanaian hardship. B. Ghanaian families.

C. Ghanaian unity. D. Ghanaian community.

62. This passage shows that _____.

A. the experience will have an impact on the author's future life

B. a fire was lit in the author's mind and he tried hard to put it out
C. Senase villagers are struggling between modern life and traditional customs
D. the author was puzzled by the strange Ghanaian life

'Kangaroo mothering' helps boost a child's health and intelligence

"Kangaroo mothering", the practice of continuous skin-to-skin contact with a newborn baby, results in healthier, more intelligent and successful children, a new study finds.

A 20-year follow-up research found that those brought up in the kangaroo method scored higher in IQ tests and earned 53% more. They were also found to be less likely to have behavior problems than babies in a control group.

Followers of the method nest their kids in a "kangaroo" position on their chest as soon as possible after birth. Both mother and baby are supposed to go home as quickly as possible.

The technique is often used in cases of premature birth (早产). In such cases, the trained mother acts as the child's main source of stimulation (刺激) and food, in the form of breast feeding.

Between 1993 and 1996, a group of more than 700 prematurely born babies in Columbia were, on the basis of random selection, placed either away from mother or were raised using the kangaroo method. Two decades later, a follow-up survey funded by the Canadian Government has shown that those who went through the latter method benefited by comparison.

Published in the journal Paediatrics, the research shows that kangaroo mothering offered significant protection against early death, with a 3.5% death rate compared to a 7.7% rate in the control group. IQ test also showed a small but significant advantage of 3.5% compared to other infants.

Lead researcher Dr Nathalie Charpak, of the Kangaroo Foundation in Bogota, said the method has "significant, long-lasting social and behavioral protective effects". "We firmly believe that this is a powerful, efficient, scientifically based healthcare intervention that can be used in all settings, from those with very restricted to unrestricted access to healthcare."

The study also found that, compared with babies in the control group, those raised in the kangaroo method went on to develop bigger brains, with significantly larger volumes of gray matter.

63. According to the passage, what is "kangaroo mothering"?
A. Mothers trying their best to improve their babies' IQs.
B. Mothers raising their babies in bags like kangaroos.
C. Mothers staying in touch with their babies early and constantly.
D. Mothers breastfeeding their babies instead of using milk powder.

64. The underlined word "infants" in Paragraph 5 probably means ____.
A. children B. kangaroos C. parents D. researchers

65. What is Dr Nathalie Charpak's attitude toward Kangaroo mothering?
A. Sceptical. B. Neutral. C. Disapproving. D. Supportive.

66. This passage shows that Kangaroo mothering can ____.
A. give children bigger heads
B. benefit children's brain growth
C. reduce the number of premature births
D. solve school children's behavioral problems

Importance of College Education

During the high school career, students may begin to question the importance of a college education. They might find themselves asking, "Why is it important to go to college?" The answer is that, more than ever, college graduates enjoy much greater opportunities available to them than those who have not received a college education.

For many high school students, being able to immediately generate an income after graduation is an appealing thought. They may also be affected by the rising cost of tuition, and while it is true that a higher education may be one of the largest expenses you will ever face, the importance of a college education has become quite evident in terms of earning potential within today's economy.

Why should you go to college? One important answer to this question is more opportunity. As opposed to generations of the past, high school graduates today are unable to obtain high-paying jobs that were once available. The U.S. has been transformed from a manufacturing-based economy to an economy based on knowledge, and the importance of a college education today can be compared to that of a high school education forty years ago. It serves as the gateway to better options and more opportunity.

There are additional reasons as to why it is important to go to college. When students experience a post secondary education, they have the opportunity to read books and listen to the lectures of top experts in their fields. This encourages students to think, ask questions, and explore new ideas, which allows for additional growth and development and provides college graduates with more opportunities in the job market over those who have not experienced a higher education.

The importance of a college education is also stressed because of the opportunity to gain valuable resources during the study. The more connections which are collected during your college career, the more options you will have when you begin your job search. Once you have ended your job search and have started your career, however, the importance of a college education has not been exhausted. Having a college degree often provides for greater promotion opportunity.

So, why should you go to college? The reasoning does not begin and end with the job aspect. A good education is beneficial from many different viewpoints, and though the importance of a college education is quite evident for many high school students, what is often not as clear is how they will pay for that education.

67. Why do some high school graduates prefer working to college study?

A. To obtain high-paying jobs.

B. To earn money at an early age.

C. To spend less money on tuition.

D. To adapt to the knowledge-based society.

68. The author most likely agrees with the idea that ____.

A. too much time is spent on lectures in college study.

B. high school education is a gateway to more opportunity.

C. college graduates gain more chances over others in job market.

D. a college degree guarantees promotion in American companies.

69. What is most likely to be talked about in the paragraph after the last paragraph of the passage?

A. Affording college education.　　B. Changing college education.

C. Receiving college education.　　D. Refusing college education.

70. Which of the following shows the development of ideas in the passage?

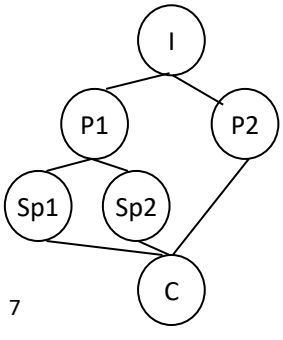
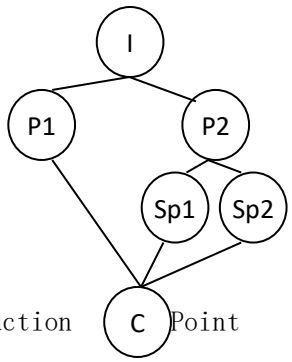
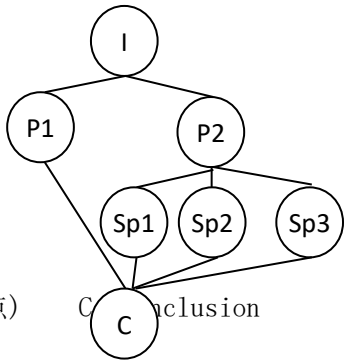
B.



C.



D.



I: Introduction C Point Sp: Sub-point (次要点) C nclusion

Hobbies

Hobbies play an important role in our life. Most people have a lot of free time available but seldom use it gainfully. ___71___ There are many hobbies from which you can pick and you can choose one that suits your talents.

Once you have decided to start a hobby, it will be wise to go through a list of popular hobbies and choose one that is close to your heart and can make you feel confident. Some of the most popular hobbies that people generally take to are reading, listening to music, gardening, fishing, sports, music, exercise and computer-related activities. ___72___ Once you start, you seldom think of giving it up.

Learning a new hobby is really a wonderful experience. As you progress, you will be living in a new world and learning new skills. You will begin to discover your hidden talents that you didn't know. You will start reading more about your hobby, meeting other hobbyists with similar interests, exchanging views and building friend circles both near and far. ___73___ In these games you will get the opportunity to meet others on a regular basis and develop great relationship.

___74___ They can help you keep good health and remain fit. On the other hand, if you are young and take a great interest in sports, you can develop your skills and finally get financially rewarded too. Similarly, gardening provides the hobbyist with enjoyable pastime and opportunity for relaxation. At the same time they get the rewards of their labor.

People take up hobbies for interest, enjoyment and relaxation. Over a period of time, you might develop outstanding skills and get financially rewarded. ___75___

A. Each of these hobbies can give you great benefits.
B. This will change when you play games like golf, basketball or tennis.
C. Most importantly, the main aim of having a hobby is for personal satisfaction.
D. Physical hobbies like sports and gardening can be very rewarding.
E. This will be more so if you take up games like golf, basketball or tennis.
F. Although these hobbies can benefit you a lot, you may not keep them forever.
G. They would rather chat with their friends than use their talents and start a hobby.

Dear Jim,
I’m very glad to hear that you are interested in Chinese culture.
Here, I’d like to recommend to you “ Chinese Poetry Competition”, a TV program broadcast on CCTV1 at 8:05 every Friday night. As we know, Chinese poetry has a long history. Some poems are written to tell a story, while others are written to express the authors’ feelings, such as happiness or sorrow. Most poems rhyme at the end of the lines, and it is the rhythm and rhyme that make poems really beautiful. I believe the program will help you gain a better understanding of Chinese culture, and we can talk about poems in the future.
If you want to know more, please let me know.
Yours,
Li Hua
第二节　情景作文（20 分）
Last week, to celebrate the school Science Festival, our class invited a robot expert to teach us how to make robots.
When the expert came into the classroom, we gave him a warm welcome and felt very excited. At the beginning, he taught us some knowledge about making robots. We sat around him and listened attentively. Then we started to have a try ourselves. Some of us put different parts of robots together; some were programming the robot with the help of the expert. Finally, the robot we made was able to move under our control in the show. Everyone applauded at our success and the expert gave us a thumbs-up.
We hope we can have more activities of this kind!

M: Yes, I’d like to make a reservation to Paris next week.
W: When do you want to fly?
M: Friday, March 17th.
W: We have Flight 736 at 7:00 in the morning and Flight 509 at 2:00 in the afternoon, which one do you want to take?
M: The one in the afternoon, please.
W: Yes. You want to go first class or coach?
M: I prefer first class. What’s the fare?
W: One way is $ 365. What seat do you like? Window or aisle?
M: Window seat, please.
W: How will you pay, cash or credit card?
M: I’ll pay in cash.
W: Got it. A window seat on the Flight 509 to Paris next Friday, first class. Can I have your name and phone number, please?
M: Vincent Anderson. V-I-N-C-E-N-T, Anderson. You can reach me at 476-831. Thank you very much.
W: My pleasure.
