Flowers for Miss Benson

Miss Benson was the kindest, sweetest, most beautiful person on the earth in my mind. She was my second-grade __36__. Early in the term, I started asking my mother to put an extra apple in my lunch for Miss Benson. __37__ I never quite worked up the courage to hand my gift to her__38__. Each day it found its way unobserved to the corner of her desk. And each day the response was the same:

Miss Benson would come in and sit down. "Good morning, children. Why, how nice!" She would pick up the__39__ of the day, and then look around the room. "What __40__ little boy or girl brought me this?"

No one__41__ the honor, least of all me. I kept my head down, looking at my desk.

"Can it be that I have a secret admirer?" she would ask.

I would feel the__42__ rising in my face. I was certain that everyone was looking at me, and I would sigh with__43__ when Miss Benson started the lesson after putting the fruit away.

One fall morning, the class was boiling with__44__. As was said, the next day, Friday, was Miss Benson's birthday. Everyone wanted to get her a present. My heart gave a jump; at last I could give her something, __45__. That afternoon was spent combing the fields for wild flowers.

In the morning I hung back as others __46__ their gifts. Finally I went to the desk and gave the flowers to Miss Benson. My reward was a smile and a pat on the head.

The next Monday, Miss Benson didn't __47__. Later on, I was asked to go to the principal's office. He, clearly and slowly, told me that because of the poison __48__ I gave her, Miss Benson was in hospital.

I __49__ all the way home because of the tragedy to my loving teacher. I begged my mother to take me to visit Miss Benson.

Miss Benson was sitting up in bed when we arrived. Her __50__ was covered with bandages. Only one eye was showing.

"I didn't know they were poison flowers," I burst out. "I didn't __51__ to make you sick. I only wanted to give you something....." I stopped talking and swallowed hard.

Miss Benson __52__ me with the eye. "You wanted to give me something __53__, didn't you, Paul?"

I nodded.

"All those __54__ were from you, weren't they?"

Again I nodded.

"I'll tell you a great big secret, Paul," she continued, "When I am married, if I have a son, I would like him to grow up just __55__ you."

I wasn't certain that I saw tears in her eye as Mother led me out of the room.

Teary-Eyed Stories from Strangers

The Man at the Market

When the supermarket clerk summed up my groceries, It was $12 over what I had on me. I began to remove items from the bags, when another shopper handed me a $20 bill. "Please don't put yourself out," I told him.

"Let me tell you a story," he said. "My mother is in hospital with cancer. I visit her every day and bring her flowers. I went this morning, and she got mad at me for spending my money on more flowers. She demanded that I do something else with that money. So, here, please accept this. It is my mother's flowers."

A Family's Food Angel

Since my mother lost her job, our family troubled new worries: no income, the same bills, and no way to afford groceries. It was around this time that she started finding boxes of food outside our door every morning. This went on for months, until she was able to land a job. We never did find out who it was and who left the groceries for us, but they truly saved our lives.

Seven Miles For Me

Leaving a store, I returned to my car only to find that I'd locked my keys and cell phone inside. A teenager riding his bike saw me kick a tire and say a few choice words. "What's wrong?" he asked.

I explained my situation. "But even if I could call my wife," I said, "she can't bring me her car key, since this is our only car." He handed me his cell phone. "Call your wife and tell her I'm coming to get her key."

"That's seven miles round trip."

"Don't worry about it."

An hour later, he returned with the key. I offered him some money, but he refused. "Let's just say I needed the exercise," he said. Then, like a cowboy in the movies, he rode off into the sunset.

Breaking Bread

Last December, before work, I stopped at a deli (熟食店) and ordered an everything bagel with cream cheese. It was toasty warm, and I couldn't wait to dig in. But as I left the store, I noticed an older indigent gentleman sitting at the bus stop. Knowing it would probably be his only warm meal of the day, I gave him the bagel.

But all was not lost for me. Another customer from the deli offered me half of her bagel. I was so delighted because I realized that in one way or another, we are all looked after.

56. To story 1, why did "The Man at the Market" hand "me" a $20 bill?
A. He was a millionaire and wanted to show off before me.
B. He thought I was extremely poor and lacked money.
C. He tried to do something good for his kind mother.
D. He expected me to share the groceries with him.

57. In story 3, by saying "Let's just say I needed the exercise", the boy means that _____.
A. he enjoyed riding in the sunset freely
B. he thought it easy to ride seven miles
C. he thought it a good way to do exercise
D. he wanted to refuse the money

58. In which story did the teller himself or herself offer to help others?
A. Seven Miles For Me
B. The Man at the Market
C. A Family's Food Angel
D. Breaking Bread

59. What can we infer about the strangers mentioned in the stories?
A. They are the kind and warm people around us.
B. They are the common guys having nothing to do with.
C. They are the highly-educated people with wealth.
D. They are the simple and mindless ones hanging around.

Optimism May Help People Live Longer

People who have an optimistic view on life are more likely to live longer, a US study said Wednesday.

The study, published in the American Journal of Epidemiology, analyzed data from 2004 to 2012 from 70,000 women enrolled in the Nurses' Health Study, a long-running US study tracking women's health via surveys every two years.

The researchers looked at participants' levels of optimism and other factors that might play a role in how optimism may affect mortality risk, such as race, high blood pressure, diet, and physical activity.

It found the most optimistic women, or the top 25%, had a nearly 30 percent lower risk of dying from any of the diseases analyzed in the study compared with the least optimistic women, or the bottom 25%.

The most optimistic women had a 16 percent lower risk of dying from cancer; 38 percent lower risk of dying from heart disease; 39 percent lower risk of dying from stroke; 38 percent lower risk of dying from respiratory disease; and 52 percent lower risk of dying from infection.

Previous studies have linked optimism with reduced risk of early death from cardiovascular (心脑血管的) problems, but this was the first to find a link between optimism and reduced risk from other major causes.

"While most medical and public health efforts today focus on reducing risk factors for diseases, evidence has been mounting that enhancing psychological resilience (弹性，复原力) may also make a difference," said Eric Kim, research fellow at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health and co-lead author of the study.

"Our new findings suggest that we should make efforts to boost optimism, which has been shown to be associated with healthier behaviors and healthier ways of coping with life challenges."

The study also found that healthy behaviors only partially explain the link between optimism and reduced mortality risk. One other possibility is that higher optimism directly affects our biological systems, Kim said.

Co-lead author and postdoctoral research fellow Kaitlin Hagan said optimism can be varied with relatively uncomplicated and low-cost interventions (干预), even things as simple as having people write down and think about the best possible outcomes for various areas of their lives, such as careers or friendships.

"Encouraging use of these interventions could be an innovative way to enhance health in the future," Hagan said.

63. According to the recent study, optimism can _____.
  A. help women live longer than men
  B. enable people to stay healthy
  C. cure people of high blood pressure
  D. make woman stay young and nice
64. From the recent study, the optimistic women ____.
  A. took the risk of dying from infection
  B. were less likely to die from some disease
  C. had a 39% lower risk of suffering from cancer
  D. were less likely to suffer from low emotions
65. The underlined word " mounting" in paragraph 7 might be best placed by _____.
  A. increasing B. appearing C. doubling D. showing
66. Both Kim and Hagan believed that _____.
  A. simple but high-cost interventions should be tried out
  B. higher optimism indirectly influences our body
  C. optimism should be encouraged and developed
  D. optimism can help people meet all kinds of challenges

Hobbies Help Cure Addiction to the Internet

While some parents have expressed concerns about the amount of time their children spent surfing the Internet during the summer break from school, it wasn't a problem for Yin Qiming.

Instead, the 37-year-old Shanghai resident and his daughter divided their vacation between cyberspace and the 8-year-old's other interests.

"My daughter has many hobbies and I and her mother respect her choices, so we accompany her to classes she enjoys, such as learning to play the drums and drawing," he said.

"She loves to play outside with her friends, so she doesn't think the Internet is a must-have thing in her life."

Yin added that he rarely imposes a time limit on his daughter's online activity.

"She sometimes uses WeChat (a popular instant-messaging tool) on my mobile phone, but only to contact her mother," he said. "Once she has her own plans every day and realizes that the internet is just a part of life, she won't become addicted to it."

Li Lin, a primary school teacher from Liaoning province, expressed a similar opinion.

"We do some homework online, including reciting stories, and the children use the Internet frequently every day of their lives," she said, noting that the children's online activity is limited to 30 minutes a day at school.

"We should make better use of the Internet to provide children with more knowledge and help them to grow up," said Li, who has a 10-year-old son.

The key to preventing children, especially those at primary and middle schools, from becoming addicted to the Internet is to limit the time they spend online and to ensure that they know cyberspace cannot replace traditional forms of communication, she said.

Mao Feizhu, a psychologist from Fujian province in southeast China, said people overestimate the influence of the internet.

"Many people, even some parents, believe the Internet plays a big role in our daily lives, and many things can be completed online, but that's not completely right," she said.

"We can use social applications to talk or play basketball games, and even share what we are thinking about, but sometimes it's impossible for our emotions to be accurately reflected in this way. What children need is emotional communication and real physical exercise. After all, love cannot be bought on the net," she said.

Perhaps, the best way to stop young netizens spending too much time online is to encourage their other interests but also accompany them when they go online: "We should use the Internet, not become its slaves."

67. What bothers lots of the parents today is that their young children _____.

A. enjoy chatting with friends online

B. are addicted to playing cell phones deeply

C. spend too much time on the Internet

D. love playing computer games too much

68. How did Yin Qiming keep his daughter free of the Internet addiction?

A. By inviting her to plan her own time limit of using the Internet.

B. By talking and playing with her frequently to spare the holiday.

C. By sparing time to accompany her developing her own hobbies.

D. By encouraging her to make enough friends in the real life.

69. According to Li Lin, the key to preventing the Internet addiction is _____.

A. to limit their time online and encourage real life communication

B. to stress the importance of friendship and making friends online

C. to make rules on surfing online and offer more online time

D. to forbid Internet use and spend more time on book-reading

70. Which of the following shows the development of ideas in the passage?

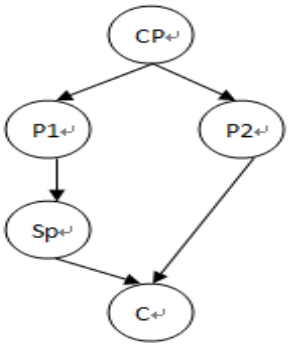
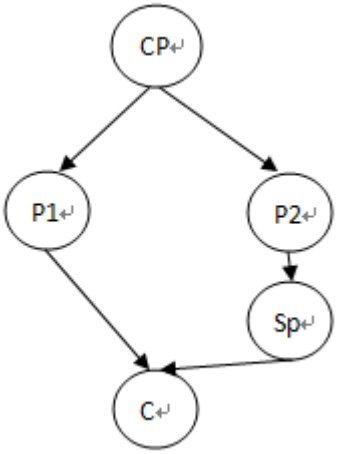
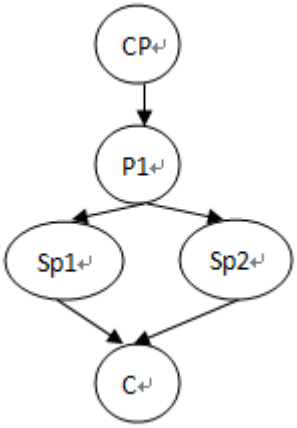
B.



C.



D.



I: Introduction CP: Central point P: Point Sp: Sub-point C: Conclusion

第二节（共 5 小题；每小题 2 分，共 10 分）

Think Positive and Feel Positive

When you’re in a stressful situation, are you confident or unsafe? Do you react positively or negatively?

___71___ A study by researchers at the University of Notre Dame found that negative thinking, and depression coming from it, can be catching in certain circumstances.

For example, the researchers studied 103 freshman college roommates who’d been paired casually. __72__ Specifically, the researchers measured the subject’s likelihood to see negative events as a reflection of their abilities and disadvantages.

After only six months, it became clear that thinking patterns and styles can be catching. ___73___ And students paired with more positive thinking roommates were more likely to become more positive in their thinking and report less depression.

___74___ So they might be particularly accessible to adopting the thought and behavior patterns of people around them —perhaps more so than people in less intense situations at other stages of life.

But maybe not. Other research has shown that, in general, people are affected by how those around them think. ___75___

A. The answer may depend in part on whom you’re around.

B. Now college freshman are in a unique, life changing environment.

C. However, think positive and feel positive is quite important for college students.

D. Students paired with a negative-thinking roommate “caught” that style and became more depressed themselves.

E. They measured each roommate’s cognitive weakness, or tendency to give in to negative thinking and depression.

F. So surrounding a negative, depressed person with people who think positively could be a powerful form of treatment.

G. But what was to the researchers’ embarrassment was that the subjects never talked with each and stayed apart from each other for most of the time.

Dear Jim,

Glad to hear that you are coming. As for the scenery spot, I do think the Badaling Great Wall is a perfect choice, which is in Yanqing District in Beijing. As is known, the Great Wall is one of the seven wonders in the world. You can go there by bus or take a train. While climbing up the Great Wall, you can enjoy breath-taking sceneries and splendid towers. Surely, you are a true man!

Looking forward to your arrival!

Yours,

Li Hua

Dear Jim,

I’m glad to hear that you are coming to Beijing, which is an extremely smart decision. As your close friend, I’m really glad to give you some advice.

I do think the Great Wall is a perfect choice. As is known to all, the Great Wall is one of the seven wonders in the world. It was first built in the ancient dynasties and rebuilt in the modern times, since it is the pride and honor of the Chinese people.

People will usually choose to visit The Badaling Great Wall in Yanqing district, in the northwest of the capital city. As it is a little far away from the city center, you may go there either by bus or take a train. Having arrived at the foot of the Great Wall, you will first of all take some photos at the large square with a symbolic monument carved with the Chinese characters for The Badaling Great Wall, very impressive. Then you may start your climbing up the Great Wall steps, which is kind of tiring and energy-consuming. However, along the way, you may enjoy the breath-taking sceneries, enormous monuments full of culture, and splendid beacon towers, which will surely fulfills your journey with unimaginable joy and excitement. Averagely, it will take you two hours to get to the top, where you will enjoy a great sense of achievement.

As is said in China, he who does not reach the Great Wall is not a true man. The Great Wall is the treasure of our country, and one of the most important and representative sightseeing of Beijing. It is, of course, a must-see for you! You can't miss it! Just come and enjoy yourself!

Yours,

Li Hua

One Possible Version

Last Friday, we were organized to pay a visit to China Science and Technology Museum. Upon arrival, we were given an introduction about the various exhibition areas of the museum at the main hall. We listened very carefully and were attracted to the exhibition of science and life.

Entering the exhibition hall, we were amazed by the splendid space models including the China Railway High-speed (CRH), the spacecraft and the rockets, which appealed many of us to take photos and have a hot discussion. Lots of us agreed that our country is on the high way to getting stronger. Knowing that there's a chance to experience the making of the space models in person in the DIY area, we rushed to there without any hesitation. There, under joint efforts, we made a model plane with what we learned in the exhibition hall, which pleased all of us.

Time flied, we didn't want but we had to bid farewell to the museum and the fabulous exhibition. On the way home, the school bus was boiled with excitement. We laughed and promised ourselves that we would try our best to make our motherland much stronger. In my mind, there was a sweet dream rising in which I discovered an unknown land with a new spacecraft from our Shenzhou series. I couldn't help smiling from the bottom of my heart.
