The Great Barn Adventure

One morning when I was 11, I explored the town's abandoned round grain barn（谷仓）. I found a chained sliding door that was wide enough for me to pass through.

Inside, there was a heavy smell of dead mice in the dark. After my eyes adjusted, I noticed a shaft (升降机井) that rose all the way to the top of the barn. On one side was a one-man elevator with a long rope and roller.

I stepped onto the platform and gave the rope a drag and the elevator began sliding up the shaft, but stopped halfway. After a brief panic attack, I noticed holes in the wall at regular intervals, forming a ladder. For reasons known only to an 11-year-old, I decided it would be better to go up than down. So, with shaking hands, I began climbing the wall.

After what seemed like forever, I reached the top of the shaft. I stood up, dusted myself off and found…absolutely nothing of interest. It was just an empty room with a ladder leading up to the roof. I climbed all the way up here for this? Then I noticed a fire extinguisher（灭火器）,which I'd always wanted to shoot off. So this was the chance of a lifetime. I tried it, and, much to my surprise, the thing worked! It shot out a thick cloud of powder that instantly filled the room. I couldn't breathe. I was going to choke to death, and they'd probably never even find my body.

Luckily, I remembered the ladder to the roof. I climbed up, popped the straw roof and saw a bright blue sky.

I suddenly realized the dust and powder pouring out of the top could draw attention. So when the dust had settled, I climbed down and slipped out of the chained door. I'm not sure if I was more excited about being alive or about not being caught, but I ran all the way back home.

56. When the author got inside the barn, he _____.

A. noticed a man on the elevator

B. opened the chained sliding door

C. saw many dead mice in the dark

D. found a shaft leading to the top

57. Which of the following is the right order of the author's adventure?

a. The elevator stopped halfway.

b. He entered the round grain barn.

c. He climbed to the top of the shaft.

d. He found a fire extinguisher and shot it off.

A. b-a-c-d B. a-c-b-d C. c-a-d-b D. b-c-a-d

58. After getting out of the chained door, the author might feel _____.

A. inspired B. relieved C. surprised D. disappointed

59. From the passage, we can learn that the author was probably a boy full of _____.

A. passions B. dreams C. curiosity D. imagination

As we enjoy the summer ocean waves along the beaches, we may think nervously about Steven Spielberg's Jaws and the great fear that sharks inspire in us. Yet we are happy to see global efforts to protect the declining number of sharks. The world has realized that we need the species, like sharks, to keep a balanced ecosystem.

Sharks, in particular, are "in" these days. Thanks to good public policy and famous stars such as Jackie Chan and Ang Lee, killing sharks for fin soup is no longer cool.

The demand for shark fins has been rising for decades, threatening sharks with extinction（灭绝）—up to 100 million sharks are killed each year just for their fins. But we have started to reverse the trend, particularly in many areas of the United States and overseas where restaurants once proudly provided delicious shark fins on the menu.

In California, a ban on the sale and possession of shark fin soup has gone into effect this year through the efforts of Wild Aid and other organizations.

Overseas marketing and public efforts featuring posters on public transportation systems and TV ads have been underway for the past few years. These efforts all show signs of success, on both the supply side and the demand side of trade in shark fins.

Actually, stopping the killing of sharks is part of a broader movement to stop the killing of wild animals and the buying and selling of wildlife products. These products come from hunting elephants, tigers and rhinos, besides killing marine life.

Whether it is shark fin soup or ivory piano keys, killing animals is big business. The hunting of elephants in search of ivory tusks for luxury（奢侈的）goods has become a full-scale war. The decrease of African elephant populations is alarming. Together with international partners, the United States is leading the worldwide effort to reduce demand for high-end products that rely on killing animals.

60. The underlined word “reverse” in Paragraph 3 probably means _____.

A. show B. keep C. follow D. change

61. From the passage, we know _____.

A. Jackie Chan and Ang Lee make fin soup popular

B. a lot of wild animals have been killed for products

C. Steven Spielberg's Jaws inspires us to protect sharks

D. the number of African elephants has been increased

62. What can we infer from the passage?

A. More animals for high-end products will be saved.

B. People have kicked the habit of having shark fin soup.

C. Shark fins will not be available any more in restaurants.

D. Global efforts have succeeded in stopping killing wild animals.

Dear David,

I’m glad you would like to share your feelings with me. It’s hardly surprising that your feelings of not being “grown up” have come on strongly at this point in your life, just before you’re about to become a father. You are asking: will I make a good father? How will I cope? Should I have brought another little person into the world? Can I provide for it? Heeelp! I think nearly every sensitive about-to-be-parent must have these occasional feelings of self-doubt and inadequacy（不适） before the birth and it would be most unusual if you didn’t share them.

It’s difficult, honestly, to feel grown-up unless you have something less grown-up to relate to. The boss with a hen-pecking wife may feel like a seven-year-old when he’s at home. But as he walks through the office door, and knows he’s going to be surrounded by staff looking to him for advice, he grows into a fully mature man. And I think it’s a mistake to imagine that we all feel, as we age, a kind of progression of states, from the baby to the adult. Most people feel, on Tuesday, about three years old, and on a Wednesday, around 80. I remember feeling very grown-up at eight, a time when I was weighed down with responsibility. These days, much older, I can, in the company of people I feel at ease with, feel like a young girl.

There’s a common remark that “all men are little boys”, but it’s not true. It’s more true that men often behave like little boys. But nearly all people, at some moments in their lives, are capable of great maturity.

Once your baby arrives, you’ll soon feel less childlike, or rather, less often. When your child tries to put its fingers into the electric plug, the adult in you will rise up to prevent it. You’ll see you have very little in common with a needy child, particularly if it's looking to you for comfort and support.

Comfort yourself, David, with two truths. One is that your friends laugh when they talk about this subject because they, like you, feel frightened. And remember that people who haven't grown up don't go around talking about the fact that they don't feel grown-up.

Hope my advice will be helpful and good luck to you and your little one.

Sincerely Yours,

Miss Advice

63. According to the passage, Miss Advice thinks David's self-doubt _____.

A. valuable B. natural C. unusual D. bearable

64. From Paragraph 2, we can learn that people's sense of maturity _____.

A. will increase with age

B. is obviously seen at home

C. changes with different situations

D. becomes stronger with familiar people

65. Miss Advice holds that _____.

A. all men behave like little boys

B. people tend to laugh at the subject

C. men with a baby feel more grown-up

D. people enjoy talking about their immaturity

66. Miss Advice wrote the letter to _____.

A. offer suggestions to a future father B. teach people how to grow up

C. encourage people to be responsible D. solve problems of the less grown-up

Does everyone want a challenging job? In spite of all the attention focused by the media, academicians, and social scientists on human potential and the needs of individuals, there is no evidence to support that the vast majority of workers want challenging jobs. Some individuals prefer highly complex and challenging jobs; others develop in simple, routine work.

The individual-difference variable（变量） that seems to gain the greatest support for explaining who prefers a challenging job and who doesn't is the strength of an individual's needs for personal growth and self-direction at work. Individuals with these higher-order growth needs are more responsive for challenging work. What percentage of ordinary workers actually desire higher-order need satisfactions and will respond positively to challenging jobs? No current data is available, but a study from the 1970s estimated the figure at about 15%. Even after adjusting for changing work attitudes and the growth in white-collar jobs, it seems unlikely that the number today exceeds 40%.

The strongest voice advocating challenging jobs has not been workers—it's been professors, social science researchers, and media people. Professors, researchers, and journalists undoubtedly made their career choices, to some degree, because they wanted jobs that gave them autonomy, recognition and challenge. That, of course, is their choice. But for them, to force their needs onto the workforce in general is presumptuous (冒失的).

Not every employee is looking for a challenging job. Many workers meet their higher-order need off the job. There are 168 hours in every individual's week. Work rarely consumes more than 30% of this time. That leaves considerable opportunities, even for individuals with strong growth needs, to find higher-order need satisfaction outside the workplace. So don't feel you have a responsibility to create challenging jobs for all your employees. For many people, work is something that will never excite or challenge them. And they don't expect to find their growth opportunities at work. Work is merely something they have to do to pay their bills. They can find challenges outside of work on the golf course, fishing, at their local pub, with their friends in social clubs, with their family, and the like.

67. What makes people choose challenging jobs?

A. Positive responses. B. Work attitudes.

C. Higher-order growth needs. D. Personal self-direction.

68. Who is the least likely to prefer a challenging job?

A. College professors. B. Construction workers.

C. Social researchers. D. Media journalists.

69. The passage is intended for _____.

A. job-hunters B. researchers C. graduates D. employers

70. Which is the best title for the passage?

A. Not Everyone Wants a Challenging Job

B. Complex Jobs Offer Growth Opportunities

C. Employers Should Create Challenging Jobs

D. Challenging Jobs Give a Sense of Recognition

However, you had better remember they keep a roof over your head when it’s cold, raining, snowing, or too hot. Understand that parents are human beings and make mistakes.____73____ Since you can forgive your friends, why not forgive your parents?

Keep company with them. Do things with your parents like watching TV, or go somewhere with them. ____74____ Listen to their old stories and learn from them. You will find they are your teachers in this way or another.

Some people simply may not be able to love their parents. ____75____ Seek help if you are being abused in any way. Parents do not have a right to harm you.

C. Parents will in turn express their love to you.

四、One possible version:

Last Monday, we had a class meeting to discuss about Chinese Style of Crossing Roads. Everyone was involved in it and we finally came up with some bright ideas.

The next day, we were divided into several groups and stepped out of school to do something to prevent this phenomenon. One group made some posters and used a loudspeaker to raise people's awareness of this problem. The other group chose to stand by the road side and used little flags to direct people to pass the zebra crossing.

Our efforts paid off, and this phenomenon almost disappeared. To our joy and surprise, Beijing Youth Daily reported what we did and praised us. What a worthy reward we received!

W: Certainly, sir. It's served in your room from 8:00 until 10:00.

M: How can I order it?

W: Just ask for Room Service on the phone.

M: Where're you heading in such a rush?

W: I'm heading home to grab something to eat and then I'll come back for our group discussion.

M: OK. See you then.

Text 4

W: Gosh! It's already 3:00PM. I must go and get my son home.

M: There's no rush. I can take you in my car.

W: Yes. But my bike has a flat tire.

M: Uh-oh! You can't ride with a flat tire.

W: I know. Don't worry. I'll fix it this week. By the way, what are you planning to take?

M: A camera. I want to take lots of pictures!

W: But I think we should also take our cellphones. We might need one if we get lost. And maybe we can take badminton rackets, my guitar…

M: Uh, Megan. It's a bike trip. Let's just ride our bikes. But don't forget your helmet!

W: How was your meal today?

M: Well, the food was good as it always is. We were a bit disappointed about the service tonight, though.

W: Oh, I'm sorry to hear that. Would you like to fill out a comment card? Or I could get a manager for you.

M: Not necessary. We know it's your peak time. We usually come a little earlier before the rush.

W: Well, I'd like to make it up to you. I'm going to give you a discount today. I'll take your drinks and dessert off the bill.

M: Oh, that would be nice. Thank you.

W: No, thank you. Your satisfaction is important to us.

W: Hey, James. Come on into the living room.

M: Yeah, uh, thanks for inviting me. As I said, I'm looking for a place where I can have a homestay experience and pick up some English and culture. Well, how many people live in this house?

W: Well, let's see. There's my American mom and dad, and they have 5 kids. Uh, the family has four dogs, three cats, a rabbit, and a, oh yeah, a large snake.

M: No, I don't think this is a good idea. I can't live here.

W: No, man. You'll like it. You and Randall can be roomies.

M: No. No way. I mean, what is Randall like anyway?

W: Oh, Randall? Ah, he's kind, and he gets along with everyone . . . when he is awake.

M: What?

W: Yeah, he plays video games about, well until about four in the morning, but the noise won't bother you much. Just wear earphones. And he can give you a ride to school . . . uh, when he goes.

M: No, forget it. I'll live with my brother in the dorm.

M: Hello, I'm carrying out some market research of Beauty Fitness Club. Would you be able to spare a few minutes to answer a few questions?

W: Sure, as long as it doesn't take more than 5 minutes.

M: OK, first of all, may I have your membership number, please?

W: Urm…It's PTF78196.

M: So that's PTF78196. OK, and could you tell me when your membership started?

W: Oh, yeah, I joined it on January, er 20th, I think. Oh, no, no. It was on February 26th.

M: And your occupation?

W: I'm a lawyer.

M: OK, now I'd like to ask you some questions relating to the club. What do you think of our classes?

W: Urm, I really enjoy them. I attend tennis and yoga.

M: If the scale is one to five. Five is the best. How would you rate your instructors?

W: Oh, I would say… the top score, definitely. They're extremely professional and supportive.

M: Do you have any suggestions for the improvement?

W: Well, the only thing I would say is the evening class. Yoga, I mean, can get very busy. Maybe the club could think about running another class in the evening.

M: Well, thanks. We take the view of our customers very seriously and I'm sure you'll see some exciting improvement in the near future.
