What I Regret

At lunchtime, Jimmy, Patrick, Devon, and I began our regular routine of our lunches. I glanced across the busy cafeteria and saw the __36__ student, Joel. He was holding his plate and waiting in lines.

Patrick __37__ him too. "Why's the new kid dressed like the headmaster?" he asked. Devon and Jimmy laughed.

"Joel's cool. He's in my English and history classes," I said. However, I kept the __38__ that Joel and I had become friends when we worked on a project together. We __39__ that we were both enthusiastic readers—something I would never admit to Patrick, Jimmy, and Devon.

I saw that Joel was __40__ toward us. "Don't do it," I thought, but in seconds he was at our table. My friends raised their eyebrows. Jimmy, Devon and Patrick piled their backpacks on the table and chairs so that there was no __41__ left for another person to sit down. Patrick said, "I don't think we have room."

This __42__ situation froze the air. I could __43__ Joel looking at me, but I stared at my __44__ as if it contained precious pearls of wisdom instead of rice and beans. After a long, uncomfortable pause, Joel __45__. I __46__ have spoken up for him, but I couldn't walk away from my three friends, could I?

Joel didn't speak to me after that __47__. He was soon __48__ around with another group of kids. A few months later, I saw an announcement about Joel being chosen to be president of the class book club. I was __49__ for Joel's achievements, but I realized I had made a big mistake __50__ I said nothing at the lunch table that day. Why was I so __51__ that my friends might find out that I like to read?

As I stared at the announcement, I knew I needed to __52__ to Joel—even if he did not want to become my friend again. I was certain that my three friends would not __53__. I was also certain that I __54__ losing them as well. However, I knew that I would lose myself if I did nothing.

As the dismissal bell rang, I gathered up my books, took (a) deep __55__, and went to find Joel.

To Whom It May Concern:

On August 27, 2016, I ordered a Skunk Scooter from your website. I was very excited when it arrived because I bought it with money I saved from doing odd jobs over summer. Unfortunately, I have experienced several problems with my Skunk Scooter.

First of all, the front wheel shakes from side to side, making the scooter difficult to ride. And also, it makes a horrible sound. The sound is louder and more annoying than a roaring engine. My dad and I had to tighten the screws (螺丝). However, it did not help. The wheel continues to shake. The scooter is faulty and cannot be repaired.

In addition, I cannot adjust the handlebars. According to your website, they can be easily raised to a height of thirty-six inches. This does not seem to be true. The handlebars are set at thirty inches, and they cannot be raised or lowered. It appears that the knob that is used to adjust the height is jammed into the handlebars, which makes it impossible to turn in either direction.

Although you advertised the Skunk Scooter as “the quickest, slickest scooter on the planet,” my purchase was an exception.

Since your website promises to accept returns, I want my money back. I have sent you a copy of my receipt. Please let me know how I should ship the scooter back to your company. I know that you would not want customers to keep broken products. Therefore, I would like to thank you in advance. My money can be mailed to me at 3260 N. Main Street, Clarks, TN 37040.

Sincerely，

Natasha Greene

Climbing in the Clouds

Edmund Percival Hillary was one of the greatest explorers of the twentieth century. He was born in Auckland, New Zealand, in 1919. He discovered an interest in mountain climbing while he was still in high school and began climbing New Zealand's Southern Alps.

Like his father, Hillary earned his living as a beekeeper. However, he continued to climb mountains. His goal was to climb Mt. Everest, which is the highest mountain in the world. By the early 1950s, several expeditions (探险队) had attempted to reach the summit of Everest, but all had failed. Then, in 1953, Hillary and a Nepalese climber named Tenzing Norgay became the first two people to reach the top of the world.

Hillary's spirit of exploration was not satisfied. He joined an expedition to Antarctica and reached the South Pole in 1958.

He also made an expedition up the Ganges River to its source in the Himalayas. Sir Edmund Hillary was a brave adventurer. He went where no man or woman had gone before.

Although Hillary was best known as the young man who climbed to the summit of Mt. Everest in the 1950s, he continued his journeys to far-off places into his senior years. For instance, in his mid-sixites Hillary flew to the North Pole with Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon. Moreover, Hillary authored many books. However, his most lasting gift, perhaps, was the Sir Edmund Hillary Himalayan Trust (信托基金). It raised millions of dollars and contributed to schools, hospitals and many other public improvements in the Sherpa villages of Nepal. In January 2008, Sir Edmund Hillary died at the age of 88. Despite being a great adventurer and known for the treasure he left, Sir Edmund Hillary always modestly referred to himself as a simple beekeeper from New Zealand.

60. Hillary was interested in _____ when he was in high school.

A. mountain-climbing B. bee-keeping

C. money-raising D. story-writing

61. Hillary became well-known because _____.

A. he reached both the South Pole and the North Pole

B. he was the first to reach the top of Mt. Everest

C. he lived in places where no humans had gone

D. he made a lot of money as a beekeeper

62. _____ is the right order of Hillary's expeditions.

a. He traveled to the source of the Ganges River.

b. He climbed New Zealand's Southern Alps.

c. He reached the summit of Everest.

d. He explored the North Pole.

A. a-c-d-b B. b-d-c-a C. a-b-c-d D. b-c-a-d

63. We can learn from the passage that Hillary is _____.

A. outgoing and fearless B. talented and honest

C. determined and caring D. hardworking and careful

Throughout childhood, kids are encouraged to take good care of their bodies by getting enough rest, exercising regularly, eating healthful foods, and drinking plenty of water. But recently children and teenagers have been warned to protect their skin. Skin cancer is on the rise among young people. Teens should make some basic lifestyle changes to help slow this trend.

Melanoma, a skin cancer, is the second most common form of cancer for people aged 15 to 29. Unfortunately, the risk of developing it has increased in recent years. One of the most important causes of melanoma is UV radiation (辐射) damage. Scientists think that some of this damage is directly linked to the use of tanning beds (皮肤美黑床). Now they have found that these beds produce UVA radiation and UVB radiation, both of which are dangerous.

Clearly, avoiding tanning beds is one way teens can protect their skin, but they must do more. They need to protect themselves from too much sun exposure as well. They must learn to stay out of the sun in summer. Doctors say that to avoid the harmful rays of the sun, young people should stay indoors between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., when the rays are the strongest. When teens have to be outdoors during these hours, they should use sunscreen that provides protection from both UVA and UVB rays.

Protection is the most effective weapon in the battle against melanoma, but paying close attention to the skin is also vital. Melanoma often begins as a mole (痣) on the skin. If it's caught before it spreads below the skin's surface, it's highly curable. Therefore, teens should watch for both new moles and existing moles. If they see anything that looks unusual, they should visit a skin doctor right away.

Teens who continue to bake in the sun to achieve that perfect tan should realize the potential consequences of their behavior. Is a sun-kissed look really worth the risk of melanoma? It's not too late to change your habits and reduce your exposure to harmful UV rays. Take action now to protect your skin and avoid this deadly disease later.

64. Teens are warned to protect their skin because _____.

A. their lifestyles are not healthy

B. skin helps slow the radiation damage

C. skin cancer is growing among teenagers

D. they spend longer time staying outdoors

65. In Paragraph 2, the author mainly talks about _____ of melanoma.

A. the cause　　B. the prevention

C. the symptom　　D. the treatment

66. _____ is the effective protection of skin.

A. Using tanning beds

B. Eating more healthful foods

C. Visiting a skin doctor frequently

D. Reducing exposure to strong UV rays

The biggest criticism (批评) of social networking is that our young people are losing their offline friends to online friends. In fact there is a lot of research that shows these criticisms are generally unfounded. Research by Allen et al. found that people are not replacing offline friends with online companions but are using them to support their offline relationships. They also found that our online friendships actually allow us to have discussions with a much more diverse set of people than in the real world and improve our psychological happiness.

However, there is one part of social networking that is deeply worrying. We find ourselves in a hyper-connected world where people access social media day and night, excited to make announcements about the tiniest details of their lives. Research is starting to show that this culture is negatively affecting not our friendships but our character.

Professor Larry D. Rosen, in his book iDisorder, presents evidence that social networking is turning us into narcissists (自恋者). He says that young people who overuse social networking sites can become vain, aggressive, and show anti-social behavior in their offline lives. But perhaps an even more disturbing effect is that one of our most basic emotions seems to be disappearing—empathy. This is the emotion that bonds us together; it allows us to see the world from our friends' points of view. Without it, we are far less able to connect and form meaningful adult relationships.

Sherry Turkle, a professor of social sciences at MIT, suggests that people are no longer comfortable being alone. This is something confirmed by a study where 200 university students were asked to go without social media for 24 hours. Many admitted an addiction to their online social network; most complained that they felt cut off from family and friends. But being alone is a time, Turkle argues, when we self-reflect and get in touch with who we really are. It is only when we do this that we can make meaningful friendships with others. She believes, as is the title of her 2011 book, that we are simply "Alone Together."

These potential changes in our characters are rather disturbing. If nothing is done, our young people could well be in trouble. Therefore, suggestions about ways to encourage our young people to avoid the problems of social networking should be made, so they can develop the kinds of friendships that are required to grow into well-adjusted and happy adults.

67. The underlined word "unfounded" in Paragraph 1 probably means _____.

A. undoubted　　B. false

C. acceptable　　D. illegal

68. In this passage, the author mainly argues that _____.

A. internet culture causes various problems

B. we are losing some most important emotions

C. online friendships do good to offline friendships

D. social networking affects young people's personalities

69. By the underlined sentence in Paragraph 4, Turkle probably means _____.

A. we rely on social network for connection

B. being alone is necessary for being together

C. being alone makes us know ourselves better

D. we hardly communicate while being together

70. From the passage, we can learn that _____.

A. we are becoming unable to understand others well

B. young people will develop offline friendships

C. young people can't go without social media

D. social media have more advantages

根据短文内容，从短文后的七个选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Is My Dog a Wolf?

In the old days wolves and dogs shared the same ancestor. ___71___. And wolves stayed wolves. Even though it has been thousands of years since dogs have been wild, many things a dog does by instinct (本能) a wolf also does.

Why does my dog chew my stuff?

It's not because he's mad at you. The baby wolf chews on a deer bone for several reasons. There is some small nutritional value gained by chewing bones. ___72___. But mostly, it is just fun and tastes good. Most of us don't leave deer bones lying around the house, so table legs, shoes, and sticks probably seem like good bone replacements. Many dogs get scared or bored when they are left alone, and chewing on something can be comforting and entertaining to them. ___73___. So when he eats your homework, it really means he misses having you around.

Why does my dog play with dirt?

___74___. Wolves dig holes to hide leftover food and bones, so they'll have a nice snack for later. Some dig to catch small underground animals, which make tasty snacks. Or they dig to create a cool hole to lie in during the summer…or a warm snow cave in the winter. Adult wolves dig underground caves for their babies to provide shelter and safety. Dogs may dig for some of the same reasons, but one thing is for sure: newly dug dirt has all sorts of interesting smells which they are crazy about.

Once you understand that dogs and wolves are similar, you can look at the ways they are different. In the wild, wolves live by wolf rules. Most of their days are spent caring for the young, resting, and hunting. ___75___. Their willingness to do this is probably the biggest difference between the two species. That's why dogs can become human's friends while wolves never.

A. Dogs, however, must live by people rules both inside and outside the home.

B. If that "something" smells like you, it is all the more attractive.

C. Digging is a survival tool for wolves, but it's just fun for dogs.

D. Gradually, dogs changed to become their own species.

E. Wolf and dog noses also do more than just smell.

F. It is also the way wolves brush their teeth.

G. How are they different?

Possible version 1

Dear Jim,

I'm delighted to know you are interested in traditional Chinese festivals. You might have never heard of Chong Yang festival, but it is actually my favourite. It falls on the ninth day of the ninth lunar month. Since nine is the largest single number, it is viewed as Senior Citizens' Day. People often do activities like going hiking and admiring flowers on this day.

As for me, I had never thought about doing anything for the elderly until I learnt about the festival at school. Our teacher asked us to do a nice thing for our grandparents. For the first time in my life, I washed my grandma's feet. I'll never forget the sweet smile she wore and the happiness I felt.

You see, I like Chong Yang festival not just because of the popular activities. The most important reason is that it serves as reminder that I should do something to show my appreciation of my grandparents' love for me. (150 words)

Possible version 2

Dear Jim,

I'm very delighted to know you are interested in traditional Chinese festivals. I want to introduce the most important one, Spring Festival.

During every Spring Festival all the family members get together to celebrate the Chinese Lunar New Year. On the eve of the day, we often sit around the table to have a big dinner, and jiaozi is the most traditional food. In many places, people like to set off firecrackers and put up spring couplets on the door. Children like the festival very much, because they will receive lucky money for good fortune.

Spring Festival is a time I look forward to all year round, because it is the happiest time, when I can enjoy the pure bliss of family reunion. (111 words)

Possible version 1

Dear Chris,

This term with my friends I took part in a meaningful activity in our school. And I'd like to share it with you. It was an activity aimed at helping us form good habits in 100 days.

After making up our mind to participate, my friends and I started to come up with what to do in the coming three months. Running, keeping dairies, etc. all flashed through our minds, but we finally decided on reading. After that we got online to search for the bestselling books and made our book lists. It was really challenging. Sometimes we felt it hard to persevere because of our busy schedule. Sometimes we really wanted to quit because of the heavy homework load. But we reminded and encouraged each other to set aside 30 minutes for our goal. Gradually, we found ourselves hooked on reading. We read wherever and whenever possible, in the library, in the playground and even on the subway.

100 days went by silently. And we became keen on reading. Everybody was overwhelmed with a sense of achievement and pride. More importantly, we fully realized that perseverance is what it takes to achieve a goal.

What do you think of that? Looking forward to your reply. (172 words)

Possible version 2

Dear Chris,

This term with my friends I took part in a meaningful activity in our school. And I'd like to share it with you. It is called "A good habit in 100 days."

Upon hearing the news, my friends and I talked about what habit we would form. One friend of mine suggested running while I thought of reading. After a discussion, we decided to read half an hour a day to enjoy the pleasure of reading. Then we surfed the Internet to find the best-sellers and made a list of books we liked.

From then on, we made full use of time to read. We read whether in the library, on the playground or on the subway. At last, we reached our goal of reading for 100 days! How excited we were! While cheering for our achievement, we made up our mind to keep on reading.

What do you think of that? Looking forward to your reply. (123 words)

W: Good morning. I'm looking for a car.

M: Right madam. What sort of car?

W: A small one. I like German cars.

M: Well, we've got this Benz. It's in very good condition.

W: Ah yes. That looks nice. Can I drive in it? (51 words)

W: Good morning! What's wrong? Can I help?

M: I think I need glasses. I can't read very easily these days.

W: Any health problem? Do you have a headache or feel dizzy?

M: No. I'm fit and well, otherwise. (46 words)

W: How'd your exam go, Jeff?

M: Badly. Sure I failed it.

W: Mine was OK. I think I passed.

M: Let's tell Mum and Dad the good news first, then. (33 words)

M: Hello Mr. Francis. It's Edward from the antiques' shop. I think we've got what you're looking for. A beautiful table came in today. It's really old---about a hundred and twenty-five years. It's very heavy wood. It came from an old farmhouse and needs a good clean because it's really dirty. It's quite big and there are six chairs with it. So it's ideal for your family because you can sit down and eat together. I'm sure you're going to love the price too! (104 words)

M: Excuse me but I'd like to change my room. I'm in number twenty-two on the first floor.

W: I'm afraid we only had small rooms left by the time you booked, sir.

M: I'm not complaining about the size; it's the TV. It isn't working.

W: The TV is an optional extra, sir. Five pounds for twenty-four hours.

M: What! I'm astonished that a hotel doesn't provide even the basics.

W: I'm sorry, sir, but that's where we differ from other hotels near the airport.

W: Hi Matt. Would you like to come to the library with me and Jane on Saturday? We asked Sam and Pete too but they're both busy.

M: What are you going to do Susie?

W: I want to collect some magazines for our history project.

M: Oh, good idea. Which library shall we go to? The one near the shopping center?

W: That one's closed. We're going to the one opposite the park. It's not the one by the hospital.

M: And how are you getting there?

W: My mum can't drive us, so we're going to walk from my house. We can take the bus back afterwards.

M: OK. What time shall I be at your house then?

W: Well, the library opens at ten-thirty, so come at ten. It takes about twenty minutes to get there.

M: Fine. See you later! (159 words)

W: Hello everyone.

Now I'd like you all to listen carefully to the following information about the social activities programme for this coming week. Ok, let's start with Monday. As you know, we planned a barbecue, but the forecast's not looking good, so we're having a Quiz Night instead--which should be good fun.

We're going ahead with the dancing class on Wednesday afternoon at the sports center. I think it was advertised on the notice-board as being five pounds, but in fact it's seven pounds. Do remember to add your name to the list, if you're interested.

Next up is Film Club Night, which will be on Wednesday. And, it will be the same time as always but the screening won't be in the Dining Hall--we're moving it to the Students' Reading Room.

And, lastly, I'm pleased to tell you about the weekend trip. We're going to Lake Canlock. The coach will be leaving from the main gates at 6 o'clock on Sunday morning, not On Saturday. OK, alright I think that's just about everything.

W: Hello! Sky Tech Store. May I speak to Mr. Johnson?

M: Yes, this is Carstle Johnson. What's up?

W: Good morning, Mr. Johnson. I'm calling about your computer service. Your computer has been fixed.

M: That's great! Can you deliver it to me?

W: Sorry, I’m afraid that you have to fetch it yourself.

M: OK. When and where can I get it?

W: You can pick your computer up from our main store. The address is 24 Grafton Street. That is G-R-A-F-T-O-N. Our main store is open from Monday to Friday, nine AM to five PM.

M: Oook. G-R-A-F-T-O-N, nine AM to five PM. By the way, how much does it cost?

W: Let me see. It’ll be forty pounds, uh, no wait, sorry, make that fifty pounds. You see, there were a lot of problems with your computer.

M: I see.

W: In case you need to contact us, our number is 5-6-4-1-7-4-8.

M: 5641-748. I got it. Thank you!

W: Emm. Mr. Johnson, please, don’t forget to bring your member card with you.

M: OK, my member card, no problem. Thank you very much. Goodbye. (189 words)
